

A Secure Solution for Single Parents

Make future dreams a reality with term life insurance

Work, soccer practice, school meetings, household chores. As a single parent, it can sometimes feel as if you're carrying the world on your shoulders.

And while all parents agree that raising children is both a joy and a challenge, one thing remains true for those who do it solo: Your children depend on you and only you. Would their future be secure if you weren't around for them tomorrow?

That's where term life insurance comes in. Its primary purpose is to replace income lost due to a premature death, ensuring leftover debts are paid and future dreams are realized, such as:

- Your home mortgage
- Current or future tuition costs
- A wedding
- Credit card balances
- Childcare
- Medical expenses and funeral costs

It can even pay for new soccer uniforms. The bottom line: Whatever your children need, the benefit from your term life insurance policy will have them covered.

Is term life affordable?

No matter your budget, term life insurance offers the most death benefit protection at the lowest cost. Additionally, the premium remains the same during the entire term period.

Most importantly: If you were to pass away during the contract term period, your beneficiary will receive the death benefit.
